Not All Obligations Are Created Equal

Traditionally, regulatory providers have used a top-down approach to produce "obligations" for their clients—long, text-filled documents that your team then has to sift through and analyze to determine what they actually need to do to be compliant.

35%

of Any Given Regulation Consists of Actual Obligations.

How do you get to what actually matters, more accurately and more efficiently?

We Define Obligations Differently

An obligation is not the full volume of regulatory text, produced for your team to spend hours analyzing.

An obligation is a specific line item explaining exactly what you need to do.

Ascent's advanced artificial intelligence scans the same text-heavy documents other providers give you and creates a clean, easy-to-understand regulatory obligations register.

Less Is More

Our technology-driven, bottom-up approach to defining obligations strips away the irrelevant information other tools provide, leaving you with the granularity you need to be more precise and effective in your regulatory compliance.

- Less text to analyze and decipher
- More time to spend on valuable business tasks
- Less potential for costly human error
- More protection from risk
- Less ambiguity around obligation language
- More consistency across your organization
- Less confusion about what actually matters to your firm
- More certainty about exactly what you need to do

Understand your obligations in minutes, not days.
